And the Golden Globe Went to...

Published on Monday, January 16 2012

Written by Audrey Cook

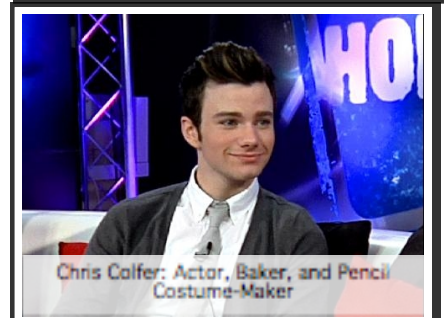

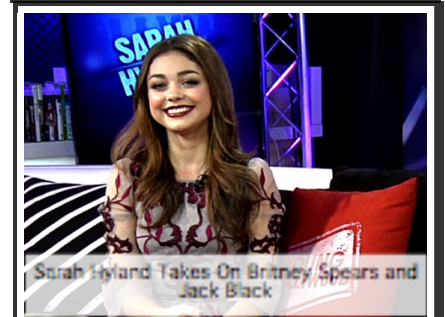

Last night was the 69th Annual Golden Globe Awards, and in case you missed any of the action, here's a recap as to how the night went:

Veteran controversial host to the Globes, Ricky Gervais, opened the show by explaining how he was offered the hosting gig again, after brutally insulting the star-studded audience last year. "The Hollywood Foreign Press have warned me that if I insult any of you, or any of them, or offend any viewers or cause any controversy whatsoever, they'll definitely invite me back next year as well." The trash-talking host continued making jokes throughout the night, even targeting the Golden Globes themselves: "For any of you who don't know, the Golden Globes are just like the Oscars, but without all that esteem. The Golden Globes are to the Oscars what Kim Kardashian is to Kate Middleton -- A bit louder, a bit trashier, a bit drunker, and more easily bought."

After Gervais's first round of jokes were out of the way, the first trophy of the night went to 82-year-old Christopher Plummer, who earned his first-ever Golden Globe for Best Supporting Actor in a Motion Picture (Beginners).

Helen Mirren and Sidney Poitier were on hand to present Hollywood powerhouse Morgan Freeman with the Cecil B. DeMille Award for Lifetime Achievement. "If you do what you love, you'll never have to work a day in your life," said Freeman. Amen! (Be sure to tune in to YHN this Wednesday, January 18, for our exclusive interview with Mr. Freeman!)
